THE GREAT SCANDAL.

Will There Be a Split in Plymouth The public opinion of Brooklyn, so far as a thor-nogh investigation yesterday could ascertain it, is not very much divided on the question of Moul-ton's statement. There seems to be but few outside of Plymouth church who do not express the opinion that it will seriously damage Mr. Beecher's standing. "What," said a prominent gentleman yesterday, "Is it possible that with such terrific acing the Gospel and enacting the pattern of Christian virtue? I tell you it cannot last, and a split in the withe? I tell you it cannot last, and a split in the church must be the inevitable result." The sale of pews next January will tell the story.

General Tracy was away early, and it is supposed that he went to the Twin Mountain House to confer with Mr. Beecher upon the advisability of preparing a reply to Mr. Moulton's statement. General Tracy has used some very plain language in regard to Mr. Moulton's statement, stignaturing it as a tissue of falsehoods and strongly hinting that he meant to hold Mr. Moulton personally responsible for all the passages reflecting upon him. His assistants are busy getting up the evidence for the defence for the approaching trial.

Mr. Thirdn's statement is now almost ready, and will probably be published on Thursday or Friday. He was not at his home during the greater part of the day, being engaged on some business in New York.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD :-

Mr. Francis D. Moulton, in his lawyer's plea to Mr. Beecher's published statement, devotes nearly a column of his pictorial organ to convict the thought the so-called "letter of contrition," com-mitted to Moulton in confidence, was "destroyed and burned up," and he produces me on the stand as his witness in the following letter :-

As his witness in the following letter:

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAHROAD CONTANY, SECRETARY'S OFFICE, I20 BROADWAY,
NEW YORK, APRIL 1872.

My Dear Moulton—Now for the closing act of justice and duly. Let Theodore pass into your hand the written applions which he holds for the improper advances, and do you pass if into the flames of the friendly fire in your room offenonciliation. Then let Theodore talk to Oliver Johnson. I hear that he and Carpenter, the artist, have made this whole affair the subject of conversation in the clubs. Sincercity yours, SAMUEL WILKESON.

Mr. Moulton strains for the interence he desires to establish against Mr. Beecher's verneuty with to establish against Mr. Beecher's veracity with

Mr. Samuel Wilkeson, Mr. Beecher's friend and acting counsel, could have known nothing of that paper except from Beecher, as I had never told him or anybody else save Tilton anything of its contents, and both Beecher and Wilkeson supposed it was delivered by me to Tilton, as it was intended to be.

If the nineteen columns of Mr. Moulton's plea are as unsubstantial as the column he has built on my letter, his entire fabric will go to leeward in apor. I declare that I never heard of that "letter of contrition" from Mr. Beecher, that he never alluded to such a letter, and that I did not hear that such a letter had been written or was in existence till two days before the tripartite agreement was arranged. Then an acquaintance came into my office, and, saying that he had neard of my my office, and, saying that he had heard of my effort to estop the sianderers of Mr. Beecher, warned me that I would utterly fail if I did not secure the surrender and destruction of what he said Tilton claimed to possess—a written contession by Mr. Beecher of his additiery. I could not believe that such a paper existed. But Tilton himself, on the might of the list of April, in Mr. Moulton's library, satisfied me that this weapon existed in some form and was then in the armory of the conspiracy. For when he earnestly and absolutely demed that Mr. Beecher had ever been guilty with Mrs. Tilton, and said that the extent of his oftence had been improper words or advances, he added that for this he held Mr. Beecher's ample apology in writing. It was this apology that I asked Moulton to get from Tilton and destroy.

that I asked Moulton to get from filton and de-stroy.

I repeat that Mr. Beecher never spoke to me of this document, nor in any way alluded to it, nor spoke of or alluded to any "coniession" or "letter of contrition" whatsoever.

Mr. Moulton is lunny as he looks upward and fancies he sees the "Life of Christ" going "nigher than a kite." It is the misiortune of the blind that they do not see. If they did he would see a once fair reputation going out of sight. The "Life of Christ" is permanent and imperishable property. It has been confirmed by the failure of a con-spiracy to check the growing circulation of the spiracy to check the growing circulation of the Christian Union and to pull down its illustrious and hopes of a brithant tool who pershed of envy and disappointed ambition. The reputation that is going "nigher than a kite" is that of a trustee who has violated his trust. The trust he assumed to Mr. Beecher was to protect his reputation against the maltee of enemies. He emphasized his assumption of the included trust of papers committed to him, and his promise to "protect them with his life," or significantly placing his hand on a pistol in his evercoat pocket. The great lawyer who counsels Mr. Moulton could have told him that a trustee cannot at will discharge himself of the obligations of his trust. The existing his head on the obligations of his trust. The existing his word and walk out of the relation he assumed. But the trustee cannot take him at his word and walk out of the relation, which both law and the interests of society make unalterable save by the terms of its creation. He cannot of his own motion discharge himself of his trust, nor can he get discharged save by the corder of a court of equity and for causes that affect not the mere will, but the ability or fitness of the trustee. Mr. Moniton assumed a trust for the benefit of Henry Ward Beecher. The law of honor among gentlemen is as binding as the common law of England and America. Frank Moulton should have laithfully executed that trust hill he died. The included trust to safety keep papers committed to him in confidence he could have discharged himself by surrendering them to Mr. Beecher when he demanded them. The papers were Mr. Beecher's. They were not Theodore Titton's. They were not the assets of a dispute. What has trustee Moulton done with them? He has converted to his own use rvery letter, every paper, every private conversation, every sacred confidence given to him by a troubled, weary, overburdened friend—has firshmoded them all into weapons and bundled them up—and publicly walked with his laternous load into the camp of Mr. Beecher's
